

MAGAZINE PERILS U.S.S. CELTIC'S CREW

The crew of the U. S. S. Celtic, at the bottom of their lives, battled for nearly an hour early today to save the ship from being blown up, following the discovery of a threatening fire in the right magazine.

The vessel was towed to a pier at the Charleston Navy Yard.

More than a thousand gallons of oil, turpentine, alcohol and paint were stored in the magazine. Flashes licked the sides of the masts and carboys and the crew immediately expected an explosion likely to wreck the vessel.

The discovery of the blaze by the quartermaster on watch, probably saved the lives of many of the crew. He was on deck when he saw smoke curling from the magazine.

The naval fire alarm signal was sounded by bell and bugle. The 125 men in the crew came tumbling out of their berths and rushed to the deck. Before they had reached their stations, however, smoke and flames were belching from the magazine and the fire threatened to spread to other parts of the vessel.

Ensign R. E. Constock was in command of the Celtic at the time the alarm sounded. Lieutenant Commander R. N. Warren, Kingston, took his post on the bridge and ordered the crew to man the gun. The men, realizing the danger, immediately went to the gun, equipped with electricity and worked frantically to prevent the flame from reaching the main magazine. The fire was finally extinguished by all and other highly combustible liquids.

The pumps were started and turned full force into the magazine, while all the lines of fire hose on the ship were manned at the entrance of the magazine. Thousands of gallons of water were turned into the blazing compartment and it was flooded above the level reached by the flames.

Much credit is due Ensign Constock for the admirable way in which he directed the crew to man the gun.

The fire was caused by a small quantity of oil which had leaked from the gun. The crew who carried out every order as they were in a fire drill of the ship is believed to have been caused by a spontaneous combustion among the paint cans. The magazine was the only part of the vessel that was damaged. The damage done was of $500. The heaviest damage is said to have been caused by the water that was turned into the magazine.

The fire caused considerable damage among the crew of the Celtic. The vessel was damaged at the yard and also in the main magazine and officers' quarters. Several officers in the main magazine were killed. The fire spread from the main magazine to the Celtic, but by the time they arrived the crew had the damage under control.

An investigation of the fire is under way.

MRS. BELMONT'S POCKETBOOK SHUTS UP IN ENGLAND

LONDON, April 29.—In fulfillment of her pledge not to spend any money in England owing to the manner of her treatment of the suffragettes, Mrs. Belmont left for the Continent today, after five days in London. The reason she set forth in England at 11 is that she is unable to get accommodation on a French or German steamship, she was obliged to travel as a freight ship.

On landing at Falmouth from the Continent, she said:

"I shall get out of England as quickly as I can. I shall not spend a farthing here."

HARVARD TO HEAR DR. OSLER TONIGHT

MAGAZINE FIRE
IMPERILS U.S.S.
CAPTAIN'S CREW

The crew of the U. S. S. "Ole", at the site of their home, battled for nearly an hour early today to save the ship from being blown up, following the discovery of a threatening fire in the right magazine. The vessel was tied to a pier at the Charleston Navy Yard.

More than a thousand gallons of oil, turpentine, alcohol and paint were stored in the magazine. Flames licked the sides of the vessel and the crew and the crew immediately expected an explosion likely to wreck the vessel.

The discovery of the blaze by the quartermaster, which probably started the lives of many of the crew. He was on deck when he saw smoke curling from the magazine.

The naval fire alarm signal was sounded by bell and bugle. The 125 men in the crew came rushing to the ship's berth and rushed to the deck. Before they had reached their stations, however, smoke and flames were pouring from the magazine and the fire threatened to spread to other parts of the ship.

Boatsman E. L. Cusack, who is command of the "Ole" in the absence of Lieutenant Commander H. N. Warren, brought Command took her post on the bridge and orders flew thick and fast.

The men, realizing the danger to their vessel and to the ship in the right magazine, worked frantically to prevent the flames from reaching the caulk of oil and other highly combustible liquids.

The pumps were started and forced full force into the magazine, while all the fire of the hose on the ship were aimed at the surface of the magazine. Thousands of gallons of water were turned into the burning magazine, but it all was doused above the level reached by the flames.

Much credit is due Ensign Cusack for the admirable way in which he stepped into the breach and the numbers of the crew who rushed to the aid of the ship as if they were in a drill training of today from an explosion. The fire is believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion among the paint and oil.

The magazine was the only part of the vessel that was damaged. The damage did a damage of $100. The latest damage is said to have been caused by the water that was turned into the magazine.

The fire caused considerable excitement among the crews of the other war vessels at the yard and also in the marine barracks and officers' quarters ashore. Several officials in the yard who heard the fire signal dashed hurriedly and went to the "Ole", but by the time they arrived the crew had the flames under control.

An investigation of the fire is under way.

DOZEN ILL AFTER RASPBERRY PUNCH AND ICE CREAM

GREAT HARRINGTON, April 29.—A dozen or more Great Harrington grangers have been seriously ill after eating ice cream and drinking raspberry lemon punch at the Sheffield Grange festival last Friday night. Hazel Freehan was thought to be dying, but rallied. Her brother Charles was very ill. Leon Scrimm, Edna Rogers and Ethel Bentley are also ill. Reports from other towns give similar experience from those drinking the punch and eating the ice cream.

BUNYAN'S GREAT ALLEGORY SEEN IN COLOR VIEWS

An unfortunate affair, in which little Mary Ann, a town girl, returned home in "trouble," started things, but Effie was as sound as Gibraltar morally and the frenzied case which papa Pemberton projected as the two young lovers showed that even parents sometimes go wrong.

The Effie of Dorothy Rundle was a bit too mature for the good of the character. You could not imagine Miss Rundle's Effie being in a Pretty Little Story.

A comfortable amount of comedy was injected into "The Blindness of Virtue," which has been widely known as Cooke. She was genuinely funny, but altogether too familiar with her own wit, and she left Cooke to everybody's delight, excepting those who were so used to wante keep in their proper place. Paul Haines was an actor, and he played the role all the acting that it needed.

"The Blindness of Virtue," is a comedy, in which a woman, by meddling parents, and everybody except poor little Mary Ann come to grief. The play is a two-act sketch, there given.

The presentation of "Candida" by Manchester players leaves nothing to be desired. It is as near perfect as can be expected from a stage production. Eugene Marchbanks was a wonder.

Miles Bina and Prospero Garret are excellent comedians in "Candida." In the last act there is an opportunity to award the part of a young man, who is a very good one, to Miles, but Miles Sims cleverly avoided it.

"Miles Dixon" illustrates a world-wide phenomenon, which is a tendency to conquer the world, come back turned. An Miles Dixon, as Ellen Kline would describe him, is a character of acting. As Miles has most of the parts, it is a pity that he does not probability show a great tendency to nervous affections, hysteria, epilepsy and various other mental disturbances if the rapid growth of nervous debility is not checked.

One of the commonest and most dangerous causes of nervous debility is the fact that it robs its victim of refreshing sleep. Such a sufferer will go to bed tired out in the evening after a hard day of mental and physical exertion, and the nerve cell in the body is craving rest; the over-exerted brain loses control of the body, and the sufferer awakes when does come it is broken and restless.

Such a sleep is absolutely indispensable to it. It is essential to healthy life (than food or exercise) and if it is not sufficient, too heavy, for one should be able to be awakened easily, and once awakened should be able to get up as ambitious as though awake for hours.

'NOTHING TO ARBITRATE' IN NASHUA STRIKE

NASHUA, N. H., April 29.—In the evening session of the investigation by the State Legislature of the Taylor shoe strike, E. E. Taylor of Boston, president of the company, occupied the stand the greater part of the hearing. He stated that he would refuse to arbitrate the differences existing between his company and the 200 or more employees who are still on strike. He said that the latter are the innocent children of the company, and that the Taylor shoe is running, and that there is nothing to arbitrate.

Taylor gave several instances for the reasons for his refusal. He said that he would not arbitrate in view of the fact that the Taylor shoe is running, and that there is nothing to arbitrate. GROWTH

Here is news that gives cause for rejoicing. Our business is growing. We are supplying the right goods in the right quantities at the right time and in a satisfactory manner. This means that an increasing number of neighbors have found that the Shuman store is the Service Store of New England. Reports from all departments show substantial increases. This is the result of organization, of discipline, of the right spirit, of a strong desire on the part of all workers to supply the needs of people. It is glorious to know that our system is producing results. We are serving the public better. We are selling more goods. We are making more friends. Better news cannot be given than news of growth.

The Day When the State Will Own and Operate Our Railroads Is Coming—The Day When the State Must Own Our Terminals Is Here

The AMERICAN does not believe that the present management should be given more money, by raising freight and passenger rates, to do more squandering. But the STATE can acquire the waterfront where these terminals must be located and construct an adequate terminal and retain the ownership of it. THIS WOULD GIVE THE PUBLIC AN IMPROVED BOSTON & MAINE SERVICE BUT WOULD NOT RISK THE PUBLIC MONEY IN THE HANDS OF NEW YORK STOCK JOBBERS.

But under the control of an IRRESPONSIBLE man, it is an instrument of great danger. The number of accidents which follow the criminal negligence of automobile drivers in this State is appalling. The other day we saw an account of a trial in a lower court of a man charged with manslaughter while operating an automobile. The judge dismissed the charge of MANSLAUGHTER but found him

The Boston American, the San Francisco Examiner, the Los Angeles Examiner, the Chicago Examiner, the New York American and the Atlanta Georgian had a most substantial hand in the work of extending relief to the recent flood sufferers of Ohio, Illinois and Indiana. The fund raised by their efforts ran upward of $30,000.

These fatalities and injuries can be greatly reduced by the courts if they are disposed to deal with the matter as vigorously as the seriousness of it demands. It is high time that the lower courts woke up to this situation. In those districts where the judges insist upon a stupid and evil leniency toward those who violate the law when they know that loss of life may be the consequence, it is the duty of the District Attorney to be ESPECIALLY VIGILANT.
